About the artist:

My current work direction links back to my roots of education, in which I was educated and raised in vernacular schools. This leads to my interest in linguistics and all its intricacies and nuances. Linguistics, for me, does not limit itself only to spoken or written language, but also visual and auditory languages. The ability to understand and master these linguistic tools are essential in producing my art, and made it even more relevant in the current age of misinformation and uncertainties.

Aside from creating paintings in oil, I also encourage myself to explore the nature of New Media art and contemporary sculpture. Combined with my interest and expertise in programming and music, I often find myself constantly challenged by my ambition, which further pushed the possibilities of my work and its intended place in the visual art ecosystem.
